

BUILDING BLOCK VIDEO SERIES, PART 3 OF 4: The National Register of Historic Places

Leverage NC has partnered with the professional team at the NC Department of Natural & Cultural Resources' State Historic Preservation Office to create How-To videos to help guide you through their wealth of resources and get you prepared for that next historic rehabilitation project.

The National Register webinar by Sarah Woodard David provides a brief history of the historic preservation legislation that underpins the Register and an overview of the North Carolina State Historic Preservation Office's structure and branches. The main theme of the presentation, however, is the National Register itself.

Questions answered include 'What is the National Register?', 'What does the National Register do and not do?', 'How does a National Register listing differ from local historic designation?', and 'What are the requirements for National Register listing?'. The webinar defines the two necessary components for National Register listing, which are architectural integrity and historic significance, and the presentation presents the process for National Register listing in the state of North Carolina.

Sarah Woodard David grew up in Stokes County, and spent many hours looking out the car window at old houses she traveled to visit grandparents in Rockingham and Northampton Counties. She earned a history degree from Guilford College in Greensboro and a Masters of Historic Preservation from the University of Georgia. She worked as a consultant writing National Register nominations and environmental review reports for about 17 years before joining the State Historic Preservation Office in 2018. She became the National Register and Survey Branch Supervisor in 2019.
